

The American Abecedarian

Absurdity is the only way we know how to live these days.
Before we went and lost our minds it was easy to say he's crazy. What to say now with the penalty of death looming just over the wall.
Everything I say is calculated but I'm no political leader.
Forget about free-thinking, this is the era of enlightenment.
Good times for love and better times for hate. You'll have to excuse me,
I have to check my phone.
Just in: the president tweets something new about minorities because killing them isn't enough.
Laugh in the face of your foes.
May they suffer in our Red White and Blue shadows.
Now grab your guns and rise,
Off we go to the schools.
Practice the lock down drills and
Quiet the room if you care for your children.
Reach for those automatics with record time.
Stay still, the guns can smell fear now.
Twelve year olds are in the trenches,
"unwavering patriotism" is what they're telling us.
Vacationing in the Bahamas while they tell the boys that War isn't murder as they send Xanax in mass amounts.
You'll see the end when zero survivors are left.
